The appointment of a morehant as Vice-Consul for the United States at Canton has caused considerable discontent amongst foreign firms doing business with the United States. A protest has been signed, not only by German firms, but also by six. British firms, and we hear it was with the latter that the protest originated. There seems good reason for objecting to the appointment, for the invoices of all the firms exporting to the United States are necessarily open to the Vice-Consul, and i: the latter is himself a merchant engaged in the same business it gives him an advantage over his competitors. There is, we understand, no personnl feeling the driver to be summoned. matter, the gentleman appointed being held in general respect, nor does international rivalry enter into the question at all. The protesters simply object to having the details of their business exposed to the inspection of one of their competitors. Consul Bunton and the Washington Gov- default six weeks' imprisonment, respectively. ernment will doubtless recognise the objection as reasonable.

There is another ground upon which objection might be taken to the appointment of Mr. WILLIAMS, though it is not one with which the foreign community of Canton is in any way immediately concerned. We refer to the undesirability on general grounds of appointing merchants to Consular office in China. The Chinese Government has a well-tounded objection to such appointments, and in some of the later treaties has expressly provided against them. In the Por- and the programme was greatly cartailed, the the qualifying documents of each member, and in continuance of the ancient tuguesc treaty it is provided that "The Con-"suls must be officiale of the Portuguese "Government and not merchants," and in the Peruvian treaty there is the following provision :- "It is further agreed that the "appointment of the said Consular Officers although not expressly bound by treaty in mittee after committee is appointed and report the matter, have for many years past researlier days of foreign intercourse merchant Consuls were appointed by several Powers, but the system was aban- thought of again. doned, and it would be inadvisable for the United States to rejutroduce it now, The Chinese objection to merchant Consuls may rest primarily on pride—the disinclination of the native officials to hold conmunication with a foreigner engaged in trade-but beyond that there is the knowledge that Chinese traders would in various ways attempt to " work the oracle" if they had the opportunity of doing mercantile business with Consuls or Consular officers; The Chinese clients of the merchant Consul would endeavour to make use of him for their own ends in ways analogous to those

This I consider to be the most difficult job of the whole work, as the gorge id which it is to be built is rook bound, and the dam will have to stand the full force of floods sweeping over it. Owing to the rapid fall in the giver these floods come down with very great force, often sweeping logs, trees and rock before them. These will have to go right over the top of the dam. The cable track between the power station and the mines has the timber felled on it for job as on some of the stoop hill-sides a very great width has to be cleared owing to the country over which the cable is to be carried being 8 ragged and precipitous. OUR PARIS LETTER

Paris, 25th June. With the Rapublic proclaimed at the Philip. pines, and protected by the United States; with the first stream of Americans landed in Cuba, and Porto Rico'n waif and stray for them to pick up at leisure; with Spain destitute of a fleet capable to match the aplendid gunnery and modern projectiles of her foe, the common sonse question is everywhere asked, "What has the Castillian to gain by prolonging the conflict?" The departure of the Queen Regent for Vienna is only a matter of a few days; the rooms for Alphonsa XIII. are ready at the Schönbrunn. Napoleon II. occupied food in their own way. The American Government is determined to pursue its plan of as to what he thought of the situation: "The definite loss to Spain of her foreign possessions; the arrival of Admiral occupying Teneriffe en route, and the bombarding of the coast cities of the Spanish mainland. Spain builds a forlorn policy, that Europe will fly to arms the moment the American course sold to Britain. That would take the sting out of the Morocco intrigues of Russin and France. There is no European Concert now. In its day it failed to settle the Armenian and Oretan questions. England is ocoupled with more serious questions; the Zollverein, and the Kriegsverein for her 360 millions of empire population: the development of her Angle Egyptian power, and the military and naval organization of China as the initial reply to Russian greed for the Celestial empire. Thon Britain has to rapidly prepare her strength, to support her ally for all fature help—the United States. No European Concert can exist with England and America hostile. Austria hangs too loosely together, and now Italy drifts between national want and dynastic revolution. The Kaiser has not matters all his own way; the socialists have had a boom in the elections for the Reichstag, but the Emperor reserves for thentthe "unconditional iron and blind gold yet found on the Malay Peninsule, and is obedience "of the army-language that ought to relieve . Bismarck's ago-nains. His Majesty. has also to face the consequences of the abolition of the treaty of commerce, from first of August, with the English colonies. While so many burning questions exact attention, the near Eastern question merits'a glance. There is an immense pile of inflaminable materials in Albania, where Montenegre, Servia, Albania, and Turkey, to say nothing of Macedonia and Austria, hold lighted matches.

No Ministry as yet. The error has been committed of turning out M. Mcline, without being ready with any successor to turn in. It was hardly worth the trouble to change the Government. Several plans to weld the six rebeen propounded, but with no practical result. "The ropublic for the republicans," is the cry; but to secure the means to attain the end is still an nuknown quantity. Each split desires. to possess the pick of the ministerial offices. and President Faure is bound by the resolution of the Chamber to accept no other cabinet but one of true blue republicans, M. Ribot-a second M. Meline-relied on "concentrating the republicans, but they wanted no concentration. M. Sarrien, not a very drastic radical, advocated "conciliation." but no republicans wanted conciliation. . M. Peytral is attempting "unionism," but apparently no union is possible till each party obtains what claims. And there are four years of that instability now before the nation. Of course the Government of the country must be carried on, so some make shift cabinet will be created. M. Hanotaux being an exceptional man is not to be thought of as a prime minister; he is not politician, but a cold, persisting, and studious functionary. He is not an orator, could not carry away an assembly with a speech, nor accopt the work of a political dradge. He is a capital foreign minister, tenacious to achieve the right solution; keeping his mind to himself. ndulging neither in enthusiasm nor fests. In habits simple and regular as a ten till four o'clock civil servant, and disclaiming official show and glitter; is never happier than when he quite the Foreign Office for his private third storey few and small rooms, on the Bonlevard Saint German. He worked his own way; commenced about half the distance. This is rather a big as a hard working journalist, won the good five holds as it were the foreign destinies of France between his hands.

The French follow with excited terest the naval plans of England, while losing not a moment to push shead their own. They have been amazed at Lord Charles Beresford bringing downhalf the House of Commons to the Dockyards at Portsmouth to see with their own eyes what the needs of the Navy are. Impartial lookers on here are one, that England must not hesitate even to be extravagant in her naval expenditure, and to at once replace all that is old by all that is new. There is still plenty of fight on both sides in the Dreyfus dispute. The next trial is fixed for the ensuing month, but it will be also dechared illegal, and so a recourse he had to the Appeal Court. BRITISH ANNEXATION IN THE PACIFIC.

HOISTING THE BRITISH FLAG ON THE BAN ORUZ AND DUEF GROUPS. Sydney, 2nd July. Word was received lately that the warship sealed orders," and one construction of the report was that she was bent upon a fing-hoisting expedition in some remote part of the Pacific. Inquiries were made at the Admiralty here, but without eliciting anything more than that "nothing was pending." Yestorday news reached here of the Mohawk's "special mission. It seems that some groups of islands still exist upon which neither the British nor any other flag has yet been hoisted, and it view of recent developments the Home Government has been advised that it would be as well to formally take possession of these places. It devolved upon the Mohawk to carry out the duty, and that she has done it efficiently is conveyed in the brief message to hand, which runs:-"We have hoisted the flag on the Santa Cruz and Duff islands." The Santa Cruz group has seven large islands. Vanikoro, Santa Cruz, Guerta, Paval, Tapona, Lord Howe, and Volcano, besides several smaller ones to the north and north-east of Volcano BOARDS, FOR FLOORING, CEILING, WALLING, Island. The Duff, or Wilson, group consists of 11 islands. Santa Cruz, the principal island of the group taking that name, is about 15 or 10 miles long. The other places-Vanikore, Tapons, Nitendi, and Matema-are of less importance. The principal of the Duff Islands is but six miles in circumforence. - Morning
